The End of Money: Toward a New, World Economy under the Credit Unit System Darrel w. kimble
THE END OF MONEY: TOWARD A NEW, WORLD ECONOMY UNDER THE CREDIT UNIT SYSTEM provides the answer to the problems the world is currently facing - climate change, pollution, widespread poverty, corruption and money-related crime, economic cycles, etc. These problems cannot be solved under the centuries-old, obsolete monetary system. The monetary system is the physical cause behind such problems and, consequently, cannot be used to solve the problems that it itself created. The solution must come from outside the cause and effect loop. The Credit Unit System comes from outside the loop. It eliminates money and everything connected with it - financial institutions, taxes, for-profit businesses, inflation and deflation, currency fluctuations, corruption, identity theft and other money-related crimes, and income disparity. Government is redefined and assumes a completely different function. Moreover, all individuals are guaranteed all the basics they need for a happy prosperous life, such as food, clothing, shelter, medical care, transportation and education, at no cost. They acquire products and services beyond the basics by using computer-generated, non-transferable, non-possessable Credit Units, which they receive as remuneration for their work, as a type of pension, or as the result of the transference of personal or real property.
